

Jesus Rafael Olivares

November 25, 1975 - January 23, 2025

Jesus Rafael Olivares was born on November 21st, 1975 in Cerralvo, Nuevo León and was called home on January 23, 2025 in Houston, Texas. He is survived by his three children—Jesus Rafael Jr., Kate, and Jason Olivares—and two brothers Marco and Sabas Olivares. His family was important to him, and though the relationships were complex, Jesus had a unique role in each of their lives.

To his children, Jesus imparted lessons in his own manner. He might not have been a conventional figure, but his influence, in both big and small ways, left its mark on them. Through his actions, his words, and his decisions, he shaped their understanding of the world. His children will remember him in their own ways, reflecting on the good and the difficult moments that made up their relationship.

As a brother, Jesus had a connection with Marco and Sabas that spanned a lifetime. Family can be complicated, and yet, those bonds remain. Jesus shared his life with them, and though there may have been challenges, there were also moments of solidarity and shared history that they will carry with them.

Jesus had a way of connecting with people, even if it wasn't always through the traditional expressions of love. He had his own style, and whether it was through humor, advice, or his straightforwardness, he left an impression on those who crossed his path. His presence was unmistakable, and while he may not have always shown his emotions outwardly, the people who knew him understood him in their own way.

Though we may have different memories of him—some good, some not as easy—we can all agree that Jesus lived his life on his own terms. Today, we remember him not just for the man he was, but for the moments that shaped his journey and how they shaped ours as well.

As we say our final goodbyes, we remember that life is not defined by one moment or even one person's choices. We honor the complexities of Jesus's life and the lessons that come with them. His passing marks the end of a chapter, but his impact—however he showed it—will remain with us.

Rest in peace, Jesus Rafael Olivares.

Jesús Rafael Olivares nació el 21 de noviembre de 1975 en Cerralvo, Nuevo León y fue llamado a su casa con Dios 23 de enero 2025 en Houston, Texas. Le sobreviven sus tres hijos—Jesús Rafael Jr., Kate y Jason Olivares—y sus dos hermanos Marco y Sabas Olivares. Su familia fue importante para él, y aunque las relaciones eran complejas, Jesús tuvo un papel único en cada una de ellas.

Para sus hijos, Jesús transmitió lecciones a su manera. Tal vez no fue una figura convencional, pero su influencia, tanto en grandes como en pequeños momentos, dejó su marca en ellos. Sus hijos lo recordarán de diferentes formas, reflexionando sobre los momentos buenos y los difíciles que formaron su relación.

Como hermano, Jesús compartió una conexión con Marco y Sabas que abarcó toda su vida. La familia puede ser complicada, pero esos lazos permanecen. Jesús compartió su vida con ellos, y aunque hubo desafíos, también hubo momentos de solidaridad e historia compartida que ellos llevarán consigo.

Jesús tenía una manera de conectar con las personas, aunque no siempre lo hacía de las formas tradicionales de expresar amor. Tenía su propio estilo, y ya fuera a través del humor, consejos o su franqueza, dejó una impresión en aquellos que cruzaron su camino. Su presencia era inconfundible, y aunque no siempre mostraba sus emociones de manera abierta, las personas que lo conocían lo entendían a su manera.

Aunque tengamos diferentes recuerdos de él—algunos buenos, otros no tan fáciles—todos podemos estar de acuerdo en que Jesús vivió su vida a su manera. Hoy, lo recordamos no solo por el hombre que fue, sino por los momentos que formaron su camino y cómo esos momentos formaron los nuestros también.

Al despedirnos hoy, recordamos que la vida no se define por un solo momento o por las decisiones de una sola persona. Honramos las complejidades de la vida de Jesús y las lecciones que nos dejaron. Su partida marca el final de un capítulo, pero su impacto—tal como él lo mostró—seguirá con nosotros.

Que descanse en paz, Jesús Rafael Olivares.
