“ I love you Uncle Buddha. Thank you for always making me laugh with your funny voices and nicknames. Thank you for watching movies with me, even if you thought they were “Boring” or “Too Hollywood”. Thank you for always being honest about my cooking, you helped me get better. I’ll always cherish the memories of going over and making meatballs and spaghetti, watching Rose Red and Storm of the Century and reading your Stephen King books. Thank you for your honesty. Thank you for showing me what it meant to sing from the heart and soul. Thank you for teaching me how to love my pets and to not be afraid of spoiling them. Thank you for loving Eloy and I. Thank you for everything. I love you always and forever. Until next time, Uncle Buddha.
